Keywords - Online manuscript submission

On April 1 2015, the online manuscript submission system for the Netherlands Journal of Critical Care has been launched. We are very happy with this development and proud that we can now offer full online submission and review processes via this system, that is commonly used by other journals as well. Hopefully, this will speed up these processes and make them more transparent, for all parties involved, authors, reviewers and editors as well.

The next step to be taken of course is to aim for Pubmed annotation and we will soon take the necessary steps. The online activities of the journal may help in this respect.

Obviously, introduction of the new system may be associated with early difficulties, that should be overcome, but otherwise this is a major step forward for the professional growth of our national journal on intensive care medicine.
